Creation and Science : conflicting or complementary?

I can define what the words creation and science mean.

I can understand the what the words conflict and complementary mean.

I can express what I think the title means.

We started this topic by defining the words in the title and trying to understand what the title means.

Creation	I think creation is when you can create something which is when it's made.
Science	Science is when you discover things and can make experiments.
Conflict	It's when you have an argument or disagreement
Complementary	It's when you can add more features to something.

Creation	I think creation is when you make or create something.
Science	I think science is experimenting of the and studying on the real and natural world.
Conflict	I think conflict is a serious an argument or a disagreement.
Complementary	I think complementary is something that improves or goes with something else.

We came to the conclusion that the question was asking whether science and creation were in conflict with each other (so it is impossible to believe in both) or complementary, so understanding is improved (so you can be a theist scientist).
